2:00 Bringing Our Children Home – Challenges, Barriers, Accountability, and Solutions

Ralph Bayard, Senior Director, Systems Improvement, Casey Family
Verlin Deer In Water, Special Litigation Section, Civil Rights, DOJ

Patrice Kunesh, Solicitor, DOI

Steve Emery, Chief Judge, Crow Creek Sioux Tribe

Although Indian children are over-represented in the foster care system, they are also over-represented in abuse and neglect reporting in the first instance. Once in the state court system, advocacy challenges range from minimal due process to lack of Indian placement options. This session will discuss the difficulties in clearly identifying and accurately documenting areas where corrective action is needed, the concurrent tribal accountability and effort required to achieve corrective action, and the collaboration that can result in better outcomes for Indian children.

3:45 ICWA Compliance – Tribal/State Collaboration: Checks and Balances and Solutions

George McCauley, QUICWA, Minneapolis American Indian Center

Paul Mineheart, QUICWA, Minneapolis American Indian Center

Daryl Toulou, Colville Tribe, Washinton

Trudy Marcellay, Chehalis Tribe, Washington

A 2005 Government Accounting Office Report highlighted the fact the no Federal Agency is authorized to review and enforce state agency ICWA compliance. In that absence, some Tribes and states have collaborated to create alternative systems to review state ICWA compliance and make corrections where problems are detected. Learn about models for court monitoring and ICWA case review, which have been effective in Minnesota and Washington.

Opportunities for Collaboration: Tribal/State ICWA Policies, Review & Recommendations for the “Green Book” - South Dakota Guidelines for Judicial Process in Child Abuse and Neglect Cases

Co-Moderators:

Danelle Daugherty, Tribal Operations Specialist, BIA

Teresa Nieto, Social Services Manager, Crow Creek Agency, BIA

Tribes have opportunities to effectively and proactively advance recommendations and changes to state ICWA policies. As an example, all South Dakota Tribes were recently approached to submit suggestions for amending and improving the “Green Book.”

Participants are encouraged to have their tribal attorneys review the “Green Book” in advance and submit suggestions in writing. The session will announce plans for work on completing an analysis policy paper to be shared with all Tribes for review by their Tribal Councils.

The “Green Book” is available at:

Funding Sources to Assist Tribes with Child Protection, Foster Care, or ICWA

Marilyn Kennerson, Regional Program Manager (Region 8), Child Welfare, HHS

Sue Settles, Division Chief, Social Services, Bureau of Indian Affairs

Kathy Deserly, Associate Director, National Resource Center for Tribes

Andrea Smith, Attorney, Children & Family Services, Port Gamble S'Klallam Tribe

Jolene George, Behavioral Health Division Director, Children & Family Services, Port Gamble S'Klallam Tribe

Emily Iron Cloud, Lakota Oyate Wakanyeja Owicakiyapi, Oglala Sioux Tribe

Roxanne Two Bulls, Deputy Director, Lakota Oyate Wakanyeja Owicakiyapi, Oglala Sioux Tribe

Tribes receive limited funding from the Bureau of Indian Affairs, enter

IV-E and other agreements with the various states to access resources, and, in one notable example, receive direct funding from the Federal government. This session will explore some of the current possibilities for funding and the challenges lack of resources create for Tribal programs actively working to preserve Indian families.

10:45 Improving Recruitment, Retention, and Ongoing Support of Native American Adoptive and Foster Care Placements

Kathy Deserly, Associate Director, National Resource Center for Tribes

Susan Ferrari, Oklahoma Tribal Foster Care Consortium

Maria Scannapieco, Oklahoma Tribal Foster Care Consortium

Karen Hamilton, Seminole Nation ICWA

Elizabeth Little Elk, Sicangu Child and Family, Rosebud Sioux Tribe

The need for Indian kinship placements and Indian foster families far outpaces the available supply in Indian Country. This session explores possible barriers to recruitment and retention, ranging from lack of funding to support kinship placements in areas of poverty to developing home study requirements that meet Federal health, safety, and welfare requirements within the unique child-rearing traditions of Tribes. This session also explores best practices for creative and successful foster care and kinship care recruitment and retention models as well as creative ways recruiters problem-solve and overcome perceived and actual placement barriers on a case-by-case basis.

Questions and Answers

12:30 LUNCH BREAK

2:00 Reducing Delay in Bringing Children Home – Simplifying the Transfer of Jurisdiction Process

Honorable Janell Sully, Children's Court Judge, Rosebud Sioux Tribe

Steve Emery, Chief Judge, Crow Creek Sioux Tribe

Shirley Bad Wound, ICWA Specialist, Rosebud Sioux Tribe

Once a state court makes a determination that jurisdiction should be transferred back to tribal court, tribal systems must be ready to quickly arrange the transfer components in order to provide safety and stability for the returning child, from initial transportation, safe placements, needed services and resources, home studies, and necessary court oversight. This panel explores methodologies and processes which help make jurisdiction transfer a seamless process for children.

3:15 Indian Foster/Adoptive Parents' Panel – Bringing the Children to Our Homes

Susana Geliga-Grazales, Foster and Adoptive Parent

Kevin & Taryn Abourezk, Foster and Adoptive Parents

Jewel Wright, Foster and Adoptive Parent

Indian foster care, kinship placements, and adoptions are key to preventing the disruption of Indian families and a child's loss of tribal identity, particularly where termination of parental rights is unavoidable. This panel showcases Indian foster parents, adoptive parents, and kinship placement providers who will share the challenges and blessings of parenting Indian children affected by family disruption.

Questions and Answers

4:30 Adjournment Day Three

Roosevelt and Jefferson Rooms set up throughout Summit for use by ICWA Directors and Tribes for impromptu meetings. Foyer space available for foster care recruitment tables.
